Cilnton on its record for the season had expected to defeat Commerce decisively yesterday, but in figuring on that result failed to take into account the condition of the field, which slowed up the game considerably. Clinton's backs, who had been relying on their speed in circling the ends, found they could not get away fast enough in the mud, and the effectiveness of their running attack suffered. At is turned out the game instead of being a one sided affair was pretty evenly contested, with Clinton dangerously near being scored on on two occasions.

In the first few minutes of play, while hundreds of rooters were still streaming in through the South Field gates, the Clinton eleven managed to sustain an offensive for nearly three-fourths the length of the field and a touchdown. After that, however, although it gave occasional evidence of a powerful attack. Clinton was unable to advance consistently. Commerce in the meanwhile was gradually tightening its defence and gradually tightening its defence and calling on an aerial attack that all served its purpose. With Sam Bol-hurling most of the passes, and urling them with surprising accuracy, merce travelled fifty-three yards in period and forty in another, only to when the Clinton goal line was est attained.

With Waterbury carrying the ball st of the time but with Levitz and mon assisting materially. Clinton marched about 75 yards to a touchdown shortly after the kickoff. There were no particularly long gains during the devance, most of them averaging from hree to eight yards but it was a tready march. Commerce braced near is goal line and forced Clinton to take he limit of four downs to carry the ball very.

commerce could not gain consistently and lost the ball on downs after taking it to Clinton's 45 yard line. Again Clinton began working the ball down toward the Commerce goal and had advanced to the 15 yard line when Waterbury fumbled the slippery oval. The half ended shortly afterward.

Although Clinton had managed to keep the ball in Commerce's territory throughout most of the first two periods it was far different in the next two. Determining to place chief reliance on the forward pass, Commerce launched an aerial attack soon after the kickoff in the third period, and four successful passes in a row by Boiden netted a total of fifty-three yards. Machemofsky caught one of the films, Weiner the next of the first two periods in a row by Boiden netted a fourth. That brought the ball to Clinton's 20 yard line.
